

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

HAYHURST, E. R. A Survey of Industrial Health-Hazards and Occupational Diseases in Ohio. Pp. xiv, 438. Columbus: Ohio State Board of Health, 1915.

HENDERSON, CHARLES R. Citizens in Industry. Pp. xviii, 342. Price, $1.50. New York: D. Appleton and Company, 1915.

Professor Henderson has given us in his last book a suggestive analysis of the newer movements in industry. Safety and health, welfare work, scientific management are subjects that are in the minds of leaders and thinkers in business. These are here discussed in relation to the larger problem of the well-being of the community as a whole. The main theme is the question of the democratization of industry. The author believes that this is possible and that it is rapidly coming to pass. An appended list of establishments at present doing welfare work, although admittedly incomplete, is imposing. The bibliography is valuable. This volume should lead the way to the necessary further study of the many subjects that could only be mentioned in this volume, because of its size.

A. F.

MONEY, BANKING AND FINANCE

DAWES, CHARLES G. Essays and Speeches. Pp. 427. Price, $3.00. Boston: Houghton, Mifflin Company, 1915.

SOCIOLOGY AND SOCIAL PROBLEMS

ADLER, FELIX. Marriage and Divorce. Pp. 91. Price, 75 cents. New York: D. Appleton and Company, 1915.

Three lectures delivered before the New York Society for Ethical Culture, entitled Marriage, Divorce, and The Illusions and the Ideals of Marriage. The point of view is highly idealistic. The author would not grant divorces for any reason whatever, allowing only legal separation.

J. P. L.

AMES, EDWARD SCRIBNER. The Higher Individualism. Pp. 162. Price, $1.10. Boston: Houghton, Mifflin Company, 1915.

This little volume consists of some eight sermons originally delivered at Harvard University. They deal primarily with the attempt to interpret the world in present-day terms. They emphasize the call of special service, of personal idealism that finds expression in acts rather than words. The author does not fear science or new truth. He has given us a book of unusual charm and merit which should be favorably received and which impresses the critic as one that will command the attention of college men.

C. K.

BAILWARD, W. A. Some Recent Developments of Poor Relief. Pp. 46. Price, 6d. London: P. S. King and Son, 1914.

This little booklet is made up of a reprint from The Economic Journal, December 1912, together with supplementary material. It is written by a man who has been officially connected with the Public Poor Relief in England. He believes that since the introduction of the old age pensions and the various other reforms of the last ten years there has come a marked decrease in the efficiency of the public care of the poor, and he presents evidence to justify his belief. His remedy is the adoption of the suggestion of the recent Poor Law Commission that all relief work should be brought under one head.

C. K.

BULLOCK, EDNA D. (Compiled by). Selected Articles on Mothers' Pensions. Pp. xviii, 188. Price, $1.00. White Plains, N. Y.: The H. W. Wilson Company, 1915.

COLEMAN, GEORGE W. Democracy in the Making. Pp. xix, 340. Price, $1.50. Boston: Little, Brown and Company, 1915.

It was Dr. Walter Rauschenbusch who said that the open forum is a socialized church. Ford Hall of Boston portrays the truth of this contention.

Democracy in the Making gives the facts about Ford Hall, sets forth its spirit, makes clear its mission, and suggests means and methods for the extension of this work in new fields.

Two wholesome characteristics of the forum are brought out by the author. First, the spirit of the forum at Ford Hall is shown to be one of hope, optimism, and outlook. It contains nothing of bitterness. Second, it has proved a successful attempt in bringing the church and Christianity to a position where they are made vital factors in social progress. One of the crying needs of the times is to get folks together, both in thought and action, as regards urgent social and economic problems. Democracy in the Making shows us how to do this very thing.

C. E. R.

GIDDINGS, FRANKLIN H. The Western Hemisphere in the World of To-Morrow. Pp. 48. Price, 35 cents. New York: Fleming H. Revell Company, 1915.

This monograph is a lecture delivered under the auspices of the New York Peace Society, March 1915, in which the author analyzes the ethnic composition, the social inheritance and the social efficiency of the American people in relation to the future of civilization.

J. P. L.

HAMMOND, MRS. L. H. In Black and White. Pp. 244. Price, $1.25. New York: Fleming H. Revell Company, 1914.

This little volume, as its subtitle indicates, is "an interpretation of Southern life." Written by a southern woman who has caught a clear vision of social responsibility, it is most indicative of a new spirit with reference to the duty of the whites to the blacks. Lightened by a delightful sense of humor, Mrs. Hammond tells of the advances the negro has made and the handicaps under which he has suffered. She does not shut her eyes to the evils of the Jim-Crow cars, to the unequal position of the two races in the courts, to the inadequacy of the school provisions, to the menace of the housing situation, nor does she ignore the white